we steward the blue

A first day creative direction for Ulysses, by David T Phung.

Ulysses already owns the rarest thing a brand can have. Restraint. The homepage is one line of serif over moving water, and the work does the talking. The task is not to add more. It is to grow the depth while keeping the silence, and to make every surface feel as engineered as the vehicles.

01 One live signal.

Electric blue is telemetry, not decoration. Reserve it for what is genuinely live.

02 The ocean at night.

Deep navy is the canvas, and light arrives only where the work is.

03 Lowercase for the creed, mono for the proof.

Human lines, measured numbers, one clear hierarchy.

04 Sell the system, not the boat.

Mako, Kraken, and Leviathan are one fleet, never three products.

05 Proof at depth.

72 hours, 5000 feet, 200 pounds, named plainly. The capability is the flex.
